TITULARY, \ n. A person invested with a title, in virtue of which he holds an office or benefice, whether he performs the duties of it or not. Cyc.

TITULAR/ITY, n. The state of being titu-Brown.

TIFULARLY, adv. Nominally; by title

TIT'ULARY, a. Consisting in a title.

Bacon. 2. Pertaining to a title. Bacon.

in marking sheep in some parts of England. [Local.] Cyc.

TIV'ER, v. t. To mark sheep with tiver, in different ways and for different purposes. [Local.]

TIV'ERING, ppr. Marking with tiver. [Local.]

marking with tiver. [Local.] Cyc. TIV'Y, adv. [See Tanlivy.] With great speed; a huntsman's word or sound. Dryden.

TO, prep. [Sax. to; D. te or toe; G. zu; Ir. Gaelic, do; Corn. tho. This is probably a contracted word, but from what verb it is not easy to ascertain. The sense is obvious; it denotes passing, moving towards. The pronunciation is to or too, and this depends much on its application or its emphasis.]

1. Noting motion towards a place; opposed to from, or placed after another word expressing motion towards. He is going to 24. It precedes the radical verb, noting con-church.

2. Noting motion towards a state or condition. He is going to a trade; he is rising to wealth and honor.

3. Noting accord or adaptation; as an occupation suited to his taste; she has a husband to her mind.

4. Noting address or compellation, or the direction of a discourse. These remarks 26. After the substantive verb, and with the were addressed to a large audience.

To you, my noble ford of Westmoreland; Shak I pledge your grace.

5. Noting attention or application. Go, buckle to the law. Dryden. wholly to them. 1 Tim. iv.

6. Noting addition.

Add to your faith, virtue. 2 Pet. i. Wisdom he has, and to his wisdom, courage. Denham.

7. Noting opposition. They engaged hand to hand.

8. Noting amount, rising to. They met us, to the number of three hundred.

9. Noting proportion; as, three is to nine as nine is to twenty seven. It is ten to one that you will offend by your officiousness.

10. Noting possession or appropriation. We have a good seat; let us keep it to ourselves.

11. Noting perception; as a substance sweet to the taste; an event painful to the mind

12. Noting the subject of an affirmation. I have a king's ooth to the contrary.

13. In comparison of. All that they did was piety to this.

B. Jonson

Few of the Esquimaux can count to ten. Quart. Rev.

15. Noting intention.

-Marks and points out each man of us to: slanghter. B. Jonson [In this sense, for is now used.]

16. After an adjective, noting the object; as deaf to the cries of distress; alive to the sufferings of the poor. He was attentive to the company, or to the discourse.

17. Noting obligation; as doty to God and to our parents.

18. Noting enunty; as a dislike to spiritous liquors.

TIVER, n. A kind of ocher which is used 19. Towards; as, she stretched her arms to Dryden.

20. Noting effect or end. The prince was flattered to his ruin. He engaged in a war to his cost. Violent factions exist to the prejudice of the state.

Numbers were crowded to death. Clarendon.

TIVERING, n. The act or practice of 21. To, as n sign of the infinitive, precedes the radical verb. Sometimes it is used TOAD-FISH, n. [toad and fish.] A fish of instead of the ancient form, for to, noting purpose. David in his life time intended I to build a temple. The legislature assembles annually to make and amend laws. The court will sit in February to try some TOADISH, a. Like a toad. [Not used.] important causes.

tives, noting the object; as ready to go; prompt to obey; quick to hear, but slow to censure.

23. It precedes the radical verb, noting the object.

The delay of our hopes teaches us to mortify our desires. Smallridge.

sequence. I have done my utmost to lead my life so pleasantly as to forget my misfortunes. Pope. 25. It notes extent, degree or end. He languishes to death, even to death. The water rises to the highth of twenty feet. The line extends from one end to the other.

radical verb, it denotes futurity. The construction, we are to meet at ten o'clock, every man at cleath is to receive the reward of his deeds, is a particular form of expressing future time.

Meditate upon these things; give yourself 27. After have, it denotes duty or necessity. I have a debt to pay on Saturday.

28. To-day, to-night, to-morrow, are peculiar phrases derived from our ancestors. To in the two first, has the sense or force of this; this day, this night. In the last, it is equivalent to in or on; in or on the morrow. The words may be considered as 2. A female whose health is drank in honor compounds, to-day, to-night, to morrow, and usually as adverbs. But sometimes they are used as nouns; as, to-day is ours.

To and fro, backward and forward. In this phrase, to is adverbial.

To the face, in presence of; not in the absence of.

I withstood him face to face. Gal. ii.

To-morrow, to-morrow, and to-morrow, Creeps in this petty page from day to day. Shak.

[Note.-In the foregoing explanation of to, it is to be considered that the definition given is not always the sense of to by itself, but the sense rather of the word preceding it, or connected with it, or of to in connection with other words In general, to is used in the sense of moving towards a place, or towards an object, or it expresses direction towards a place, end, object or purpose.]

To is often used adverbially to modify the sense of verbs; as, to come to; to heave to. The sense of such phrases is explained under the verbs respectively.

In popular phrases like the following, "I will not come; you shall to, or too, a gennine Savon phrase, to denotes moreover, besides, L. insuper.

TOAD, n. [Sax. tade, tadige.] A paddoc. an animal of the genus Rana, the Rana Bufo of Linne; a small clumsy animal, the body warty, thick and disgusting to the sight, but perfectly harmless, and indeed it is said to be useful in gardens by feeding on noxious worms.

TÖAD-EATER, n. A vulgar name given to a fawning, obsequious parasite; a mean sycophant.

the genus Lophins, the fishing frog. Cyc. OAD-FLAX, n. [toad and flax.] A plant of the genus Antirrhinum; snap-dragon; calves' snout.

22. It precedes the radical verb after adject TOAD-STONE, n. [toad and stone.] In mineralogy, a sort of trap rock, of a brown-ish gray color. The toad-stone of Derbyshire is generally a dark brown basaltic amygdaloid, composed of basalt and green earth, and containing oblong cavities filled with calcarious spar. Cyc.

TOAD-STOOL, n. [toad and stool.] A sort of fungous plant that grows in moist and rich grounds like a mushroom.

TOAST, v. t. [Sp. Port. tostar, to toast or roast. Qu. are these from the L. tostus ?] To dry and scorch by the heat of a fire; as, to toast bread or cheese. It is chiefly limited in its application to these two articles.]

To warm thoroughly; as, to toast the feet. [Not much used.]

To name when a health is drank; to drink to the health in honor of; as, to toast a lady. Addison writes " to toast the health;" a form of expression I believe not new used.

TOAST, n. Bread dried and scorched by the fire; or such bread dipped in melted butter, or in some liquor. Dry toast is bread scorched, or it is scorehed bread with butter spread upon it. Soft toast is made by immersing toasted bread in melted butter, and called dipped toast.

or respect.

The wise man's passion, and the vain man's toast. Cowley. 3. He or that which is named in honor in drinking TOASTED, pp. Scorched by heat; named in drinking the health. TÖASTER, n. One who toasts.

2. An instrument for toasting bread or cheese.

TO'ASTING, ppr. Scorching by fire; drinking to the honor of.

TOBA€'€O, n. [so named from Tabaco, a province of Yucatan, in Spanish America, where it was first found by the Spaniards.)

plant, a native of America, of the genus Nicotiana, much used for smoking and